"The Constitution Is Not a Finished Document," is the caption of an editorial mentioned here last week as appearing in "West Coast Druggist," a trade magazine. It is reproduced herewith:

"During the years to come, the constitution of the United States will be amended and added to many times. To think otherwise is to brand oneself a reactionary who believes that every change is a change for the worse.

"It is the popular attitude on the part of many money-entrenched individuals to cry that the Constitution is a sacred document that must not be changed, modified, added to or subtracted from. Those who dare say that there is no such thing as a perfect document, no such instrument as a perfect constitution are lightly and quickly branded as reds, communists and socialists. The words are being used all too freely in these troublesome days. To brand a man who is fighting for the right to live, the right to eat, the right to engage in business as a red, because he suggests that the constitution is not being rightly interpreted by the courts when under the cover of property rights a firm can despoil, destroy and tear down society itself, is to cry wolf, wolf once too often."

It will not be long before Fascism in this country makes such frank analysis of "American ideals" an act of treason, so let us discuss it while we may.

To begin with, we must remember that the constitution of the United States was written during a period when opportunity for the individual was practically unlimited; that period endured until the last frontier was settled, and men the country over needed but stout hearts, strong arm and a bit of native shrewdness to succeed.

When it was no longer possible to "go west, young man, go west"—unless one were disposed to drown himself in the Pacific ocean, opportunities became fewer and fewer until at the present time there are very few indeed. It would seem, then, that times have changed and that the constitution, while still an admirable document in many respects, has not been changed to keep up with the march of time.

An altogether different situation now exists, particularly for that class who have always been and always will be, I suppose, identified as labor. During the days of unlimited opportunity the craftsman had but to apply for work, and a job was his; today the machine has displaced so many workers that even in "boom" times we would doubtless have an unemployed roll well up toward 20 millions.

What of them? Are they to starve because some one says that the constitution is a "finished document"? A vehicle that cannot be changed to some way or other recognize the advent of the machine and the desperate plight of the hungry millions who have long since ceased to get nourishment or spiritual satisfaction out of an over-worked bromide of "American ideals"?

The writer of the quoted editorial has said that the constitution will be changed. He has suggested that evolution should not be branded with the iron of radicalism. I have given you one reason why inevitable the constitution will be changed—and I'll probably be branded for my pains.

And now that election day has practically moved into the spare bedroom, one last word from one who is slightly familiar with the machinations of politics: When you have selected whom you believe to be the best man for any office, allow no campaign propaganda to deter you from your purpose. Vote for the man—not against what some one else says he is.

Campbell Ladies
Attend Fed. Meet
At Mountain View

Pundita circle members who attended the Santa Clara County Federation of Women's clubs at Mountain View Friday were the president, Mrs. W. H. Stray, Mrs. eGorge W. Burrow, Mrs. R. Y. Maxon, Mrs. Laura Allen, Mrs. L. J. Carboni, Mrs. M. E. Purmort, Mrs. Rose Hanger and Mrs. Wendell Thomas.

A large and enthusiastic audience listened to an enlightening talk by Miss Josephine Seaman, state president of federated clubs, on the topic, "The Federation and What It Means." She likened the organization to a family, which is the group itself, and family business to the work it is trying to do.

The children of the federation were the junior groups which should ever be encouraged.

She then explained the family financial situation, and of the limited sources of income which could and should be rectified. An interesting recital of her visit to the penitentiary, of the parole system, and the educational facilities of the institution, closed a most profitable session.

C. E. Convention
Is Successful

The annual convention of the Santa Clara district of the Christian Endeavor Union was held at the Congregational church here Friday, Saturday and Sunday. The union is made up of 28 societies from churches of several denominations in the county. The average attendance was over 150 daily.

Arrangements for the convention were made by the ladies and young people of the local church. A banquet held Saturday evening was supervised by Mrs. S. N. Hedegard and Mrs. Frank Cutting. Mrs. Dora Lowrie had charge of the Sunday morning breakfast; Mrs. Lloyd Brown, the Sunday evening lunch. Miss Dorothy Merriman was chairman of the entertainment committee, and Miss Hancie Naylor headed the decorating committee. The program was arranged by the district officers, with President Donald McCash of Palo Alto presiding.

Sedley Pillow of Morgan Hill was elected president of the district at election of officers held on the first day of the session. Other officers elected were Miss Hancie Naylor, treasurer, and Dennis Bennett, a member of the intermediate cabinet.

Following the election Rev. Aldis L. Webb of Long Beach addressed the congregation.

Saturday roll call was taken, a picnic luncheon enjoyed, and the officers held a conference. There were also moving pictures and addresses during this session, with a banquet in the evening.

Rev. Everett C. Thomson, pastor of the Los Gatos Presbyterian church, gave the closing address Sunday evening, at which over 200 people were present.

The purpose of these annual meetings is to acquaint the young people with each other, and to help solve the problems of Christian Endeavor work.

Arthur Eldrich, Stanley Silva, Joe Ruscigno, Jerry Hecker, Tom Cain, Byron Smith, George Currier, Albert Tedesco, Bob Burrow and Richard Eldrich, Campbell Sea Scouts, accompanied by Skipper Worthin Grattan, Saturday attended the Navy Day program at Mare Island yard.

The boys were correct in uniform, and made the trip by car instead of resorting, as customarily, to their trusty motor-sailer.

Among particularly interesting events of the day were the laying of keels for USS Smith and USS Preston, exhibitions of cutting metal under water, concert by the navy band, dancing, a grand tour of the ship-building shops, etc.

Dr. Anderson
Warns Against
Propositions 9-17San Jose, Calif.
Oct. 29, 1934

Editor The Press:

The entire membership of the Santa Clara County Medical society is urging thinking people to vote "no" on initiative proposition No. 9 (Chiropractic) and proposition No. 17 (Naturopathic), for these reasons:

1. They would amend present laws that now protect human lives and would legalize practice by incompetent and inadequately trained persons who cannot meet the present standards that the California legislature has set up for those who wish to treat the sick.

2. One standard of training should be required for every person treating the sick or injured. There should be no special favors or privileges for any group. The California legislature has fixed these standards for the protection of the public. Do not permit them to be lowered or disregarded. Vote "no" to maintain these standards.

3. Incompetent and poorly trained persons will often fail to diagnose contagious diseases. Do not endanger the lives of your children and your friends by granting incompetent persons unlimited rights to treat the sick. Vote "no" to protect your children and your friends' children.

4. Vote "no" to prevent entry into California of hordes of incompetents who would attempt to treat the sick, injured and afflicted as a racket and solely for financial gain.

5. Vote "no" to prevent expectant mothers from falling into the incompetent hands of those who are improperly and insufficiently trained to render the highest type of maternal care, thereby endangering the lives of mothers and babies. I would urge that you vote "no" on propositions No. 9 and No. 17 in order to insure for California's people the best type of medical and surgical care. Urge your friends to do likewise.

Very truly yours,
F. R. Anderson, M.D.

"BIG MUDDY"

A Commentary On the "Sheriff Sweepstakes"

Back in the middle west the Missouri river, a roistering, boisterous, often sluggish, always treacherous stream, is characterized by the name "Big Muddy," due to the fact that its waters constantly support a vast pigment of earth. By the same token the caption fits with singular aptness the campaign being waged against Sheriff William J. Emig, who is a candidate to succeed himself in the office he now holds. The well-known tactics of his opposition and our penchant for a fair deal all around prompts us to come out definitely in support of Mr. Emig.

Throughout the campaign Sheriff Emig and his supporters have sought to influence voters not by whispered innuendo, not by the hurling of cunningly-shaped mudballs, but by honest discussion of his administration of the office. Throughout the county he has appeared before audiences which have received him kindly. To them he has explained the difficulties of the job, doubled since the repeal of prohibition. He has answered all questions to the best of his ability, and his informal addresses have gained him hundreds of new friends.

Fighting an honest fight, ignoring the insults heaped upon him, doing his job uncommonly well, we feel that "Bill" Emig deserves the support of every voter who would like to maintain in the sheriff's office a clean-cut fellow who is too much of a man to stoop to mud-slinging.

Farm Bureau to Meet Nov. 12 to 15
At Bakersfield

By Ralph H. Taylor

Celebrating its 21st birthday, the California Farm Bureau federation, which has participated in large measure in the development of California agriculture, will meet at Bakersfield Nov. 12-15 inclusive for its annual convention, with every indication of a record-breaking attendance.

Pressing farm problems, bearing on virtually every branch of the industry, will come before the convention for discussion and action, with farm credit problems, the Prorate act, marketing agreements, transportation and taxation as leading issues of the four-day meeting.

The 1934 convention assumes unusual importance and significance in light of the fact that California agriculture, after enduring the full impact of the depression, is confronted with a maze of new problems, incident to the march toward recovery and rehabilitation.

But with all the problems, there will be a new note of optimism in the Bakersfield meeting, for there are reassuring indications of better days ahead—notably the marked up-turn in farm income, during both 1933 and 1934. And added to this shaft of sunlight is an apparent lessening of unemployment in the cities, especially in California, which will strengthen the demand for farm production.

Broadening the scope of the convention, Alex Johnson, secretary of the federation, announces that invitations to participate in the meeting have been extended to all cooperative marketing organizations, the state department of agriculture, the college of agriculture, the State Supervisors' association, the grange, Farmers' union and other groups directly interested in the problems of agriculture.

PETER FINDS HE IS MISTAKEN

BUTCHER THE SHRIKE was not the only newcomer in the Old Orchard. There was another stranger, and it did not take Peter Rabbit long to discover that he was looked on with suspicion by all the other birds. The first time Peter saw him he was walking on the ground some distance off. He didn't hop, but walked, and at that distance looked all black. The way he carried himself and his movements as he walked, made Peter think of Creaker the Grackle. In fact, Peter mistook him for Creaker. That was because he didn't really look at him. If he had he would have seen at once that the stranger was smaller than Creaker.

Presently the stranger flew up in a tree, and at once Peter saw that his tail was little more than half as long as that of Creaker. At once it came over Peter that this was a stranger to him. Of course his curiosity was aroused at once. Anything like that is sure to arouse Peter's curiosity. He didn't have any doubt whatever that this was a member of the Blackbird family, but which one it could be he hadn't the least idea. "Jenny Wren will know," thought Peter, and scampered off to hunt her up.

"Who is that new member of the Blackbird family who has come to live in the Old Orchard?" Peter asked as soon as he found Jenny Wren.

Jenny's sharp little eyes snapped and she twitched her funny little tail as only she can. "What's that?" she cried.

"Who is that new member of the Blackbird family who has come to live in the Old Orchard?" repeated Peter.

The First Time Peter Saw Him He Was Walking on the Ground.

"There isn't any new member of the Blackbird family living in the Old Orchard," retorted Jenny Wren tartly.

"There is, too," contradicted Peter. "I saw him with my own eyes. I can see him now. He's sitting in that tree over yonder this very minute. He's all black, so of course he must be a member of the Blackbird family."

"Tut, tut, tut, tut, tut," scolded Jenny Wren. "Tut, tut, tut, tut, tut! That fellow isn't a member of the blackbird family at all, and what's more, he isn't black. Go over there and take a good look at him and then come back and tell me if you still think he is black."

Jenny turned her back on Peter and went on hunting worms. There being nothing else to do, Peter hopped over where he could get a good look at the stranger. The sun was shining full on him, and he wasn't black at all. For the most part he was very dark green. At least, that was what Peter thought at first glance. Then, as the stranger moved, he seemed to be a rich purple in places. In short, he changed color. His feathers were like those of Creaker the Grackle—iridescent.

The Perfect Fool

Dear Mr. Wynn:

I just heard of a man who kept company with a woman for sixty years and at last he married her when he was one hundred and nine years old. Do you believe this? If so, how do you account for a man marrying at one hundred and nine years of age, after going with a woman for sixty years?

Sincerely,

B. WILDERED.

Answer: He probably couldn't hold out any longer.

Dear Mr. Wynn:

My son, who is in Bridgeport, Conn., has gotten into some sort of trouble and has been arrested. I have been advised to get a criminal lawyer for him. Are there any criminal lawyers in Bridgeport?

Yours truly,

E. LIZABETH.

Answer: There probably are several, but you'll have a hard time proving it.

Dear Mr. Wynn:

I just visited the city of Washington and went to the government buildings. I was particularly interested in the senate chamber. I saw a minister sitting next to the vice president of the United States. Tell me why is the minister there? Does he pray for the senators?

Sincerely,

A. SITESEER.

Answer: No! No! No! The minister does not pray for the senators. The minister takes a look at the senators and then prays for the country.

Dear Mr. Wynn:

I met a young lady last week and am very fond of her. We were discussing "kissing" last night and she said that kisses were like a bottle of olives. What did she mean by that?

Sincerely,

OS. Q. LATION.

Answer: Very simple. She means that after you get the first one, the rest come easy.

Dear Mr. Wynn:

I have traveled all over the world. Everything is hustle and bustle. There seems to be no sentiment left in the world. Is there one place in the world I can find "happiness" and "contentment"?

Yours truly,

THE MATING SEASON

HAVE you ever heard of the "Door of Hope" in Nanking, China—and its "mating season"? Last month the Door of Hope held its "mating season," which may sound like something for birds, but it is for girls; girls who want to get married.

The "Door of Hope" is an institution in Nanking which shelters and educates former slave girls. From six months to a year, these girls are kept there for domestic training. And periodically the institution announces that its "mating season" is open. For a week then, photographs of the graduates are hung on the walls of a room where the prospective bridegrooms may look them over.

When a man decides to become an applicant for a certain photograph, or for the young woman represented by it, he in turn submits to the management his photograph with the answers to a questionnaire which covers his age, occupation, income, habits and references. If he is found to be a satisfactory applicant, he is permitted to call upon the young lady. And, given her consent, the marriage is arranged without loss of time.

During the last mating season there were 151 applicants, from whom 19 girls took their choice. And while an open door mating season of this kind hardly fits in with our viewpoint of mating and marriage, who can say it doesn't have its advantages? One hundred and fifty-one to nineteen, all qualifications submitted before the girl consents to a meeting. That "has it"

The vogue of the shirtmaker frock has been carried right over into the autumn, but the new members of this popular family are a trifle less severely tailored than those one has seen in all smart places during the summer. Here is an excellent example of what we mean—with chic short epaulet-like sleeves and soft gathers. You can make it of a fabric as formal as you may wish. It would be as smart as Paris in black with crystal buttons and a white satin knot at the throat. Or perhaps you would prefer it in crepe morocain in the warm new shade called "clay-rust."

Complete, diagrammed sew chart included.

Pattern 9986 may be ordered only in sizes 14, 16, 18, 20, 32, 34, 36, 38 and 40. Size 16 requires 3½ yards 39-inch fabric and ¾ yard 1½ inch ribbon for bow.

OUTLAWS OF EDEN

By
Peter B. Kyne
W.N.U. SERVICE

SYNOPSIS

At the close of the Mexican war, Robin Kershaw, with his bride, rode into northeastern California. Here he found an ideal valley for ranching and cattle raising. They christened it Eden Valley. Below Eden Valley is a less valuable tract which Kershaw's wife names Forlorn Valley. Joel Hensley settles in the lower half of the valley. There is bad blood over fences and water. Kershaw kills Hensley and the blood feud is on. By 1917, Rance Kershaw, his son Owen, and daughter Lorry are all that remains of one clan. Nate Tichenor is the sole survivor on the Hensley side. Returning after an absence of nine years, he goes to help Lorry in her car and finds her father has died of heart disease. Silas Babson controls the Forlorn Valley settlement through his bank. He schemes to control the irrigation and hydro-electric possibilities of Eden Valley. The banker proposes to play Nate against Lorry, assuming that they are carrying on the old feud, in this way getting control of lands necessary to the project.

He was striking at Rance Kershaw over the shoulder of the latter's daughter, quite confident that she would protect her father when Babson suggested that, in return for a renewal of the unsecured notes and mortgage, she should sell him at a reasonable price that four thousand acres with which he planned to embarrass Nate Tichenor.

He realized he must keep such a deal in abeyance until he could organize the Forlorn Valley Irrigation district, for, with the district formed before Nate Tichenor could complete his deal with the power company, the district could enter a condemnation suit against Tichenor, and thus block the aspirations of the power company.

He distrusted the local legal talent in a crisis loaded with potential legal dynamite, so that night he went to San Francisco to engage the services of a legal firm noted throughout the state for its knowledge of water law. Indeed, Babson was rather in a hurry to get out of town, for he considered it good strategy to be absent when old Rance Kershaw should come into the bank to argue and plead. Leave a frightened, worried man alone for four days and he's much easier to handle on the fifth. So Babson departed, unconscious of the fact that his bluff, complicated with the sudden return of Nathan Tichenor to Eden Valley, was to kill Rance Kershaw and turn the current of the Kershaw hatred upon Silas Babson and all his works and poms.

CHAPTER V

NATE TICHENOR, from early boyhood, had had more than his share of experience with sudden death and tragedy, and it had developed in him a certain stolidity in such emergencies. For ten minutes he held Lorry Kershaw's head against his shoulder and neither spoke nor moved.

"Now, then, Miss Kershaw," he soothed presently, "this is no time for weakness. You're a Kershaw and none of your clan ever needed time out for that. You said you wanted to take your father home?"

She nodded dreadingly. The Kershaws, like the Hensleys, always buried their own dead.

"And I wouldn't, if I were you, permit my mind to dwell on the thought of your absolute aloneness in the world," he continued. "That way madness lies. I know. I've been through all that. After two years in the A. E. F., where, it seems to me, I lost every comrade I managed to achieve an affection for; after losing my mother and aunts while I was in France, and realizing I hadn't a single friend in the community where I was born and raised, I found myself, when the war ended, the loneliest human being imaginable. Often I wanted to come back to Eden Valley and know you better, but—"

"Yes, I understand. Father was what he was, poor dear."

"Well, be that as it may, you're not nearly so badly off as you think you are, and one of these days, when you have time to think about it, I'll tell you why." He was almost abrupt. "I suppose we'd better get along."

"Yes, I suppose so," she agreed, and started her motor. Nate Tichenor followed in his car. Arrived at the Circle K headquarters no men came out to meet them.

"Where are your riders?" he queried.

"They started with the cattle drive up into the forest reserve this morning."

He lifted Rance Kershaw's body out of the car, carried it into the house and disposed it on Kershaw's bed.

He drew a sheet over the corpse and rejoined the girl in the living room. "I reckon," he said, in the homely mountain idiom, "you Kershaws never have any truck with undertakers. Seems to me the Kershaws don't use preachers, either."

"No, we just read the service ourselves."

"The Hensleys always did, too. Lock the house up and drive in to Valley Center with me in my car. Have you in mind some woman friend you can bring with you to keep you company?"

"I have no friends, Nate Tichenor."

He frowned, then smiled faintly. "I forgot we're the last survivors of two clans that were beyond the pale. Well, we'll hire somebody. There must be a practical nurse in Valley Center. When we get there I'll telegraph my old superintendent, Rube Tenney, to come up with his wife and two children."

She yielded without argument to his suggestions—commands, rather.

Doctor Donaldson made no comment when in his office an hour later, Lorry Kershaw informed him of her father's death. He readily issued a death certificate.

"When will the funeral take place?" he asked.

"Tomorrow, at two o'clock," Lorry answered him.

"I'll telephone the coroner," Donaldson went on. "He'll take my word for it that an inquest isn't necessary and issue the burial permit."

While Lorry Kershaw waited in the car, Nate Tichenor scouted around town and succeeded in engaging the services of a Miss Lizzie Bachman, who in her youth had almost graduated from a nurse's training school in San Francisco.

Tichenor's next action was to call upon the editor of the local weekly paper, the Valley Center Register. "I am Nate Tichenor, of Eden Valley," he announced. "I do not seem to remember you. Apparently you came to Valley Center after I left Eden Valley."

The editor said his name was Joe Brainerd and that he was pleased to meet Mr. Tichenor.

"Mr. Ranceford Kershaw died about three hours ago, very suddenly, Mr. Brainerd," Nate told him. "No, I didn't kill him. He perished of heart disease and will be buried in the Kershaw family cemetery in

He Lifted Rance Kershaw's Body Out of the Car.

Eden Valley at two p. m. tomorrow. Friends and neighbors are invited to attend. And may I ask, Mr. Brainerd, as a special favor to Miss Kershaw and myself, that you do not take this opportunity to print a couple of columns of ancient history? Although you do not know it, the Hensley-Kershaw feud ended in 1917. Both Miss Kershaw and I would like to think that the matter is by way of being forgotten and we'll both be very grateful for your co-operation."

"My dear sir," Brainerd replied with dignity, "you mustn't presume to formulate my editorial policy."

Nate Tichenor looked Brainerd over bleakly. "Well, run it. Next week there'll be another newspaper in this town, with a real newspaper man in charge, and you'll have a taste of active competition. And now that we understand each other, I want you to run a hundred black-bordered death notices and send a man to paste them up in various conspicuous places around the town. That used to be the custom in this country. A few people might like to know of Rance Kershaw's death, so they can come to his funeral as advertised."

He wrote out the copy for the job-printer, paid his bill and departed without further conversation. The editor put on his hat and walked over to the local hotel upon the veranda of which sat Mr. William Rooney, the deputy sheriff of the Valley Center district.

"Bill," he queried, "what do you know about Nathan Tichenor?"

"Nothing bad. Why?"

"Would you say that a threat of his should be taken seriously?"

The deputy sheriff rolled a comical eye at the editor. "I haven't seen the boy since he was in high school here, but from what little I know of his tribe I should say none of that breed ever made a threat. They made promises—an' kept 'em."

"I sized him up that way," the editor replied.

After eliciting from Brainerd all the news the latter had, Mr. Rooney strolled away to distribute his tidbit of gossip around Valley Center. Almost the first place he went was to the bank of Valley Center, Henry Rookby, in charge during Babson's absence, received him.

"I see young Nate Tichenor's back in the country. An' Rance Kershaw's kicked the bucket. Died o' heart disease right smack in front of the Bar H gate, an' Nate Tichenor an' Lorry Kershaw 've been in town together an' thicker'n thieves."

"That Nate Tichenor's a bad lot," Mr. Rookby murmured darkly. "I never liked him. I've mean to tell me he's around with Lorry Kershaw now, helping her out in her trouble?"

Mr. Rooney nodded.

"The hypocrite! He's back here to smash the Kershaw outfit. Not another reason in life. Bill, Rance Kershaw's estate must owe Tichenor more'n three hundred thousand dollars an' for the past three years old Rance has been using clam shells and woodpeckers' heads for money. Interesting situation. Very interesting."

When he turned to wait on a customer Mr. Rooney continued on to the Valley Center garage to discharge another load of interesting information.

Arrived back at the Circle K headquarters with Lorry Kershaw, and Miss Lizzie Bachman, Nate Tichenor, after the fashion of a rural neighbor, did the chores.

After dinner he kindled a log fire in the living room fireplace. He was a straight, well-set-up young man, not over thick but muscular; he had a little crescent out of his left ear and a faint white scar about three inches long ran across his left temple and disappeared into his hair. His teeth were strong, even, white and well cared for. His nose, thin and high and a fraction too long, tended to spoil what would otherwise have been a handsome face, but lent to him an air of distinction. It was the nose of a thoroughbred, a thinker. His eyebrows, heavy and almost black, were a bit overhanging, thus giving to his glance an expression of alertness and distinctness, particularly when he asked one a question.

Lorry had already observed that he moved with quick, precise motions, like one who was sure of himself and in the pink of physical condition.

About eight-thirty the nurse retired; as her bedroom door closed behind her Nate Tichenor arose, shoved an easy chair toward the fire and waved Lorry into it. He remained standing until she seated herself.

"Too bad your father wasn't here when I called this morning. I might have preserved his life for many years," Tichenor snapped his fingers. "Kismet!" he murmured. "We thought you were waiting until we got in so deep we couldn't swim out, then you could smash us more easily."

"Had I chosen to smash you a long time ago there was nothing to stop me. You were helpless."

"Then why didn't you?"

"I didn't need the money and I knew I could always protect myself. I could have gotten the ranch at 25 per cent of its value. As a matter of fact, I did plan to buy your mortgage. Surely you do not think I am so careless as not to have kept a close watch on the Kershaws."

"Your people always wanted all of Eden Valley, of course. So you planned to buy the mortgage and foreclose."

"No, I planned to buy it and hold it, because only in that way could I be assured the Kershaws wouldn't be annoyed. I planned to give you time to work out of the jam you are in; then, if you couldn't make the grade, I planned to buy your outfit, lock, stock and barrel, at a fair price. Owen was dead, your father was a cripple and you couldn't operate the business."

"Of course I could operate it," she challenged. "And I shall. The cattle business is bound to recover. It's getting better every day. With in two years beef will be selling at ten cents on the ranch."

"I do not doubt that. Who is your father's foreman?"

"I am. Since graduating from the university in 1921 I have operated this business. I do a man's work. I know cattle and I know my job. I can ride, rope, and brand and I bust my own saddle stock. I hire and I fire. I've had to do it."

"And you want to keep on doing it?"

The girl nodded.

"Well, carry on."

"I cannot unless you buy the ranch mortgage to protect me and yourself, otherwise it will be foreclosed."

"In a few days," he suggested, "go to see Babson and say that I am inclined to grant you additional time provided he will do the same."

"I can't understand why you are so kind."

"It's a fault I inherited from my father." A tiny smile flitted around his firm mouth. "Your grandfather tried hard to be neighborly to my grandfather but my grandfather was hard-boiled and mean and stupid and wouldn't play the game; as a result he spoiled all subsequent opportunities for his clan. It's my chance now and I have a curious yearning to make good, particularly since it will not cost me anything," he added bluntly, as if ashamed of his chivalry.

"I thank you more than I can say. We've been paying the bank in Valley Center 12 per cent on our unsecured loans."

"Well, 12 per cent is legal in this state, Miss Kershaw. However, strike Babson for a reduction to 7.

"Had I Chosen to Smash You a Long Time Ago There Was Nothing to Stop Me."

Give him an argument. You may win. Babson's probably as hard as a picnic egg, but he may have an unsuspected soft spot."

"I wish I could agree with you, but I find that impossible. Our ranch was mortgaged to a San Francisco bank, but recently Babson bought it from them."

"He has a hen on," said Nate Tichenor, "and I'll have to find out whether it's a Bantam or a Plymouth Rock. A coward and a potential crook. Money-mad. A schemer. Miss Lorry, he wants the Circle K ranch. When he ascertained from my attorney that the Bar H was not for sale, he decided to acquire the Circle K, so immediately he purchased your mortgage."

"But why has he developed this sudden interest in Eden Valley?"

"I do not know, but I intend to find out. However, he'll never own the Circle K. Whenever you find yourself unable to hang on to it, I'm the rightful heir to it. Understand?"

"Perfectly. You're sure you will not permit him to crowd me? Sure this isn't a generous impulse because you find me in such a sad case today? An impulse you may, with reason, regret next week?"

He drew a checkbook from his inner breast pocket, went to her desk and signed a check in blank. "You fill that in for what your father's estate owes Babson and his bank," he ordered curtly, "and secure me with your promissory note."

She tossed the check in the fire. "What's your interest in me?" she demanded. "I can understand sympathy and gentlemanly kindness but not a blank check that could be filled in for nearly two hundred and ninety thousand dollars."

"I met your brother, Owen, in France. It was before Cantigny. I was the chief of No. 4 section of my battery, and my gun got bogged in a small shell-hole in the road. The teams were new, half-trained and unused to draft—and the drivers were worse, so I had a lot of plunging and tugging—no co-ordinated effort—and there we stuck. There was an infantry regiment resting by the side of the road, and pretty soon a private came up and told the green lead driver to dismount and let him try. I saw by the way this doughboy soothed the excited horses that he knew horses—so I took the place of the driver on the swing team. Fortunately, I had a good driver on the wheel team, so presently, with the cannoneers and spare drivers at the wheels and pushing behind, we gathered our teams and made one steady, concentrated pull—and the gun came out. And when the infantryman dismounted from the lead team, Owen Kershaw and I recognized each other. I said: 'Thanks, Kershaw. I'm obliged to you. Good luck to you.'"

"What did Owen say?" the girl asked softly.

A Desert That Will Remain

There is one desert in Arabia which bids fair to remain forever impregnable—a real desert this, a literally infernal waste, as arid as a floor of granite, as hot as a furnace blast, as dreary as a cemetery of the Wahhabis, a desert of agony for man and beast. It is that region of volcanic drift 800 feet above the sea and about 8,000 miles square, in the Hejaz, southwest of Jebel Shammar. Harat Khalbar, as it is called, has been for centuries a land of mitigated terror for caravans.

Hard to Set Down Just What Is "Sex Appeal"

An old subject, but always of vital interest, is the matter which a famous woman writer deals with in the following article:

"With an apology for the request, one of our readers asks, 'Would you write in the column your definition of what is sex appeal?'"

"The question will make some of my readers smile. To define sex appeal—to name the unnamable, to describe the indescribable—even though it is known to every adult, and is in fact so obvious as to need no definition! That will be the first reaction of many people to the question, 'What is sex appeal?'"

"But I am not so sure sex appeal is something understood and obvious to all. The term conjures up, of course, visions of a slinky siren, voluptuous, blazing eyed, full red lipped—the personification of sex, to whose allure all men are slaves. And yet there are men to whom this 'vamp' type of woman is no more dangerous than is the sheik or gigolo type of man to many women. So there is no formula even for the strictly physical element in sex appeal."

"The strictly physical element, you may say—speaking of sex appeal, isn't the physical element all? And that brings us to my point. We are speaking, not of love, of which sex is the consummation, but of sex appeal itself. And my thought is that even sex appeal is not all physical. The young wife who is advised, if she would keep her husband's love, to keep her looks, does well, of course, to follow that advice. But if preoccupation with keeping young and pretty for him makes her vain, selfish, neglectful of his interests, it must affect not only his love for her, but her appeal for him. In a recent popular play a husband after cruel inconsiderateness and neglect expects to wipe out his wife's resentment with a passionate kiss and he is surprised and disappointed to find her quite unresponsive. 'You forget,' she says, 'that I stopped liking you.'

"It is not a question without sense, that 'What is sex appeal?' It may help to make marriages more successful if young people will realize that among average normal people, even the basic physical appeal between a man and a woman is usually not entirely apart from a pleasing of personalities, liking each other."

Paul Kantlehner made the touchdown for Campbell off left tackle in the last part of the second quarter.

Starting for Campbell wire F. Lovoi, R. James, B. Thompson, P. Arnold, J. Bohnett, T. Pisano, V. Tedesco, H. Hyde, P. Kantlehner, P. York and R. Keesling. Substitutes sent in were L. Garrens, J. Conetto, A. Satariano, R. Tuso, V. Karnagel, W. Brown and B. Farum. Lon Garrans at tackle, Robert James, end, and Philip York, calling signals and acting captain, stood out as very good players.

BOY MANAGER SOLD FOR $150,000

Photo shows one of the happiest couples in California, Joe Cronin and his bride, the former Miss Mildred Robertson. In baseball's biggest deal in years Cronin left the Washington Senators to accept a five-year contract as player-manager of the Boston Red Sox. His salary, which he declined to discuss, is known to be in excess of $20,000 a year, conservatives placing the figure at between $25,000 and $35,000 yearly. Cronin, age 28, who hails from San Francisco, is spending his honeymoon in his home town.

NEW STREAMLINE TRAIN SETS RECORD

Los Angeles to New York in 56 hours and 55 minutes! That is the record of this bullet-nosed M-10001, Union Pacific speedster, powered by a 900 horsepower Diesel engine. Railroad companies throughout the country were much pleased with the fast run, which erased the old record of 71 hours and 27 minutes made 28 years ago. Streamlined trains are being built in various railroad yards and will soon begin replacing the iron-horse. A San Francisco-Chicago run of the new type train for regular passenger service is being planned. Above are three Union Pacific officials who crossed the continent on the record trip. Left to right are F. W. Charske, chairman of the executive committee; Carl R. Gray, president; W. A. Harriman, chairman of the board.

NO WEDDING BELLS

Before a marriage can take place, De Onate, known on the screen as Ralph Navarro, must prove conclusively that he is Spanish and not of Filipino extraction, the law declares.

CALIFORNIA FARMERS ARE PAYING TOP WAGES OF U. S.

Washington—(WNU)—The Federal Bureau of Agricultural Economics has been surveying labor conditions on farm throughout the nation. Results show that on October 1st California farmers were paying farm help highest wages in the nation.

Farm help in this state was receiving $37 a month and board, a figure tied only by Rhode Island and exceeded by none. Average throughout the United States was only $18.63. The farm labor supply in California was set at 110 per cent of normal, with demands 78 per cent normal. The figures were taken at a time when much labor was being employed throughout the nation during harvest.

News of the Week

Continuing his 18-year fight for freedom, 51-year-old Thomas J. Mooney has asked a leave of absence from San Quentin to plead his case before the Supreme Court of the United States.

Mrs. Rheba Crawford Splivalo, state director of social welfare, has been named defendant in a $10,000 damage suit by Anna Standahl, who said she was knocked down by Mrs. Crawford's car, August 6. An employee of the welfare director was driving the car at the time.

Twelve to 16 inches of snow is reported to have fallen in the Mineral King country near Three Rivers, Tulare County. The floor of the Giant Forest, dry this time last year, is blanketed with two inches of snow. Cattlemen are more optimistic, declaring another such storm will insure green feed for the winter.

San Diego authorities are attempting to enforce a county ordinance requiring vaccination of dogs against rabies. One woman refused to have her dog vaccinated, saying that such inoculation was merely superstition and that the rabies scare was highly over-rated.

Announcing their intention to fight for real temperance, the California North Women's Temperance Union held their 54th convention at Sacramento. President Mrs. Louise J. Taft cited the fact that deaths from drunken driving have increased 47 per cent, and declared that proper state liquor control is necessary to combat present conditions.

The body of a woman which was found in an open field near Fresno has been identified as that of Goldie Bartley, ranch cook. The slain woman was the wife of "Battling" Murray, pugilist, who was killed four years ago. Since his death his wife has lived in fear of her life.

C. E. Hochstetler, western assistant federal coordinator of transportation has been conferring with rail, harbor and steamship officials in various California ports in an effort to formulate plans to unify Pacific port freight rates. Unification of rates is said to be national in scope.

Dr. Bailey Willis, Stanford geologist, has been called into consultation again concerning the south pier of the Golden Gate Bridge. Earlier in the month he declared that this pier is in danger of resting on a foundation of slippery rock and that further investigation will be necessary before construction begins.

Promptly on San Juan Day, October 23, swallows disappeared from San Juan Capistrano. Each year on this date, declare the priests, the birds leave for the south. On St. Joseph's Day, March 19, the birds always return, fighting other birds for possession of the trees and arches.

A second cooperative winery is being started in Napa County. The new one will be independent of the one operating at Calistoga, but will be operated along similar lines. Government aid is being sought for the site, which has not yet been chosen.

Eighty-eight vessels of the United States fleet are steaming up the Pacific coast toward their home waters at San Diego, Los Angeles and San Francisco.

Some sort of natural dam on a Santa Cruz Island broke recently and a seven-foot wall of water rushed down the little island valley sweeping eleven cabins of Anderson camp into the sea. Two camp caretakers heard the roar and barely escaped death by racing up a mountain side.

High spot—or low spot—in San Francisco's and Sacramento's milk war was when a Bay city grocer dropped his price to a cent a quart. Not to be outdone, a nearby competitor actually gave milk away. Most prices during the war ranged around four and five cents a quart.

The Ventura Chamber of Commerce has sent a suggestion to the Federal government to have the national census taken every five years. Statistics become out of date too quickly under the decennial system, it was pointed out. Also a census would provide employment for many "white collar" workers. The petition stated that a 1935 census would be especially valuable.

Two young aviators, Robert F. Strong and Robert C. Duncan, crashed in isolated Dublin Canyon near Oakland. Both of them, licensed pilots and studying advanced flying were killed as the plane went down in a storm.

Three boys, the eldest 19, attempted to kidnap a San Francisco bank teller for $100 ransom. As they drove him across a toll bridge in his own car, he jumped out and called bridge attendants to his aid. The boys were captured and jailed.

NEW PARK-IN THEATRE

Here is a blimp-view of the latest thing in motion picture theaters. Just drive into a big parking lot, park your car and watch your favorite actors and actresses on the screen while seated comfortably in your automobile. This photo shows the park-in theater at Los Angeles, which claims to have the largest screen in the world. A careful check on patrons of this theater show that they drive an average of 36 miles to see a show. Patrons may come dressed as they please, in anything from beach togs to formal wear. Sound of the films is sent out on beams in such a manner that listeners may close their car windows and still hear plainly, it is asserted. Several park-in theaters have proved to be popular in the East, Los Angeles having the first one in California. At present a site is being sought in San Diego for such a theater.

Sports

Forecasting football scores these days is just like predicting southern California weather—it can't be done, unless you want to pull that old one about the "unusualness" of it. Thus dopesters consider the Stanford-U. C. L. A. battle on November 3 as just another of life's little mysteries, even though the Indian war-paint does look particularly bright and glaring to other Pacific Coast pennant-bound elevens. The Indian-Bruin contest will be interesting to all fans who like to see brawn meet brawn on the striped turf.

The Bruins, supposed to be one of the weaker teams this side of the Rockies, has proven itself anything but. Uclan fans were moaning at the beginning of the season, saying that their gladiators could not touch last year's team. Along with other "puny" teams on the Coast, the Bruins have pleasantly surprised their followers. Coach Bill Spaulding has more and not-so-pleasant surprises to spring on the big, bad boys from the Farm, and Tiny Thornhill is waking up to the fact that the games he scheduled for "breathers," he has come the closest to losing.

Although light for a Coast Conference squad, the boys from Westwood stone-walled their northern brothers from Berkeley. The only way Cal could cross their goal line was via the toe and boot method. Pretty lucky that the conference big-wigs have some accurate place-kickers. That's about all the Bruins need to become a Pacific Coast threat.

The Indians will probably be able to hold their own against the Bruin aerial attack. Santa Clara made them decidedly air-minded earlier in the season. Matching speed against speed, Stanford has the edge as a team, although Grayson and his deer-footed companions will have a tough time keeping up with speedy Chuck Cheshire or young Spaulding. Ted Key of the Bruins will iron-man against Bones Hamilton, Indian heavyweight, in off-tackle bucks and through center. The Uclans probably won't waste energy attempting to plow through the Stanford line, however, which just loves to hold 'em Eli.

The mighty sons of the Stanford Red had better watch out if Coach Bill Spaulding's stomach itches. His boys just won't lose for him when he starts scratching. It's the luck sign for Uclan. Coast teams are fearful lest Spaulding break out with the seven-year itch.

Another coast game this week-end which will be bad for apopleptic fans is the Berkeley and Santa Clara tussle. Determined to show that they have big-time stuff, the Bears will do their utmost to cuff their way to victory over the undefeated boys from the prune country. The Bears will have their paws full keeping the tongue-twisting Bronco backfield from messing up the white line, ten yards ahead of the U. C. goal posts. Cal no doubt will start out on the defensive, trying to sound out the Santa Clara tactics. After a few minutes of wary watching the Berkeley boys, who have not shown too much of that stuff that charms alumni, will have to put on full steam, not only to hold the Broncos, but to erase the goose-egg donated to them at the opening gun. The Broncos have shown themselves tough on defense, but they really get riled when someone tries to score on them.

The two most evenly matched teams, Washington State College and St. Mary's, will probably play the most nerve-shredding game. This game takes place at San Francisco's Kezar Stadium, where, fortunately, hospital accommodations are excellent. Although defeated in a breather by Nevada, 9 to 7, the Gaels, hailed by experts as "the best coached team since the days of Rockne," are taking football seriously this season as Columbia, California and Fordham can testify. Coach Slip Madigan did his own scouting for the coming contest, watching the Cougars play Oregon State last Saturday.

Felix Pennino, Gael left end, plans to have extra long whiskers for the game. He never shaves on the day of battle.

News Oddities

Ontario—Henry E. Morrison had just gotten out of the hospital where he had spent a year with a broken back. Eleven days after he had returned to work, a window frame on which he was working gave way, breaking two vertebrae and fracturing seven ribs.

Valley Ford—Donald Pelliscio is proud of the buck he shot. Instead of wearing the usual autumn gray coat, the animal is a coal black, including the eyes, ears and tail. It is rumored that $1500 has been offered for the animal, which is to be mounted and preserved.

Redlands—Detectives, sportsmen and citizens were much perplexed here just after the recent rain. A small trout was found swimming merrily in a downtown gutter. Where it came from is still a mystery.

Long Beach—Eight years ago Albert M. Devaul disappeared. Finally his wife was granted a petition declaring him legally dead. A few days ago he returned to the world, having recovered completely from a case of amnesia. During the eight years he knew himself as Bert King.

Sacramento—Articles of incorporation have been filed in Sacramento for the Forward America, Non-Farming Corporation. Purposes of the organization are "to enter into the business, profession, non-occupation or calling of not raising hogs." The organization proposes to go the Mojave desert and "there not to buy land on which not to grow corn not to feed the hogs not raised."

Nanking Permits Widows
Freedom of Remarriage

Another step in the emancipation of Chinese women has been recorded by an order issued at Nanking by the Kiangning Hsien, or district government. Under this order a widow has complete freedom of choice whether she shall remarry or remain single.

Under the old custom a widow could remarry only under direct orders of the family of her late husband. In the Kiangning district it has been customary for families to force a widow to remarry in order that they might recover the money which her late husband had paid out to her family when she was a bride.

DRUGS?

Don't make the mistake of giving even a 14-year old boy strong medicines meant for adults.

Boys and girls who have reached their "teens" are not ready to be given powerful drugs!

It is not wise to give laxatives of adult strength to a child, just because you give them less frequently or in less amounts. Many stomach upsets and bowel troubles of growing children can be traced to this single mistake.

Use a liquid laxative containing senna (a natural laxative). California Syrup of Figs has the right amount for children's use, and this rich, fruity syrup does not harm or upset a child's system.

Give that headachy, bilious child a little of this gentle laxative when constipated, and a little less, if dose is repeated until bowels seem to be moving regularly and thoroughly without need of help.

Get the true California Syrup of Figs containing senna and cascara, which will not weaken the bowels or irritate the kidneys. You'll soon have full evidence that it safely relieves constipation in children.

THE "LIQUID TEST." First: select a liquid laxative of the proper strength for children. Second: give the dose suited to the child's age. Third: reduce the dose, if repeated, until the bowels are moving without any help at all.

An ideal laxative for this purpose is the pure California Syrup of Figs, but be sure the word "California" is on the bottle.

Wrong Impression of "Doctoring" in China

The belief that in China the people do not pay their doctors when they are sick but only while they keep them well, has been shown to be false by writers on China. In a recent article in the New Outlook a writer gives an account of their system of medicine, which he says he has always thought one of the best. Each doctor is a specialist, with a single prescription supposed to cure everything. When a member of a family gets sick, the family calls in as many doctors as they can afford to pay. He adds that this incidentally bursts forever the untruth that Chinese doctors are paid to keep the patient fit. The correspondent says that when several of these doctors are called in, each with their different prescriptions, a necromancer is summoned to choose which of these prescriptions shall be employed. If successful, the doctor and necromancer share the praise; if unsuccessful, the blame is shifted from the doctor to the necromancer and from him to the "will of heaven."

Why Liquid Laxatives Do You No Harm

The dose of a liquid laxative can be measured. The action can thus be regulated to suit individual need. It forms no habit; you need not take a "double dose" a day or two later. Nor will a mild liquid laxative irritate the kidneys.

The right liquid laxative will bring a more natural movement, and with no discomfort at the time, or afterward.

The wrong cathartic may often do more harm than good. An approved liquid laxative (one which is most widely used for both adults and children) is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, a prescription. It is perfectly safe. Its laxative action is based on senna—a natural laxative. The bowels will not become dependent on this form of help, as they may do in the case of cathartics containing mineral drugs. Ask your druggist for Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin.

National Topics Interpreted

by William Bruckart

For the first time since the federal reserve system was created a very real rift has developed between the federal reserve board and the federal advisory council, that group of business leaders which is supposed to act as intermediary between the reserve board and the public. The line of cleavage has developed over gold. How far it may go in disturbing faith in the federal reserve system as a banking structure is yet too early to tell, but I find in many quarters frequent questions as to the indication that politics may be creeping into government supervision of the country's largest banking unit, the federal reserve system.

The controversy had its origin in a statement of views delivered to the reserve board by the advisory council last month. Of course, the advisory council has no power and can only function in accordance with its name and give suggestions to the reserve board. Its influence nevertheless heretofore always has been an important factor in federal supervision of bank policies and any wide difference of opinion between the advisory council and the reserve board naturally is an influential factor in financial conditions. The reserve board did not enjoy the statement of views from the advisory council, which was to the effect that "no real or permanent recovery" can be hoped for until the federal government returns to the gold standard for our currency. It said unequivocally that the currency and credit supply now existing is ample for all needs and that business cannot be expected to go forward until it has some assurance of a permanency in our currency. In addition to the council's criticism of the currency policy of the administration, it did not pull its punches with respect to the countless governmental experiments in business. I quote that paragraph of its statement:

"A serious factor of rapidly increasing importance is the tendency of business enterprises directly conducted by government agencies to reach out further and further into fields heretofore occupied by private capital, thereby destroying taxable values. The use of government money in competition with private business is not only paralyzing to private initiative but experience has amply demonstrated that it is costly, generally inefficient, and that its disastrous effects reach far beyond the limitation of the particular industry immediately affected."

The council had much more to say respecting other policies of the present administration, including what it described as a constant "threat of inflation," a condition that the council felt was stifling personal thrift. It asked directly whether there was any inducement for an individual to save or to buy life insurance and preserve earnings against the time when age will prevent continued production of income if there was an overhanging threat that all these savings may be wiped out by uncontrolled inflation of the currency.

Obviously, the federal reserve board was wrought up when the advisory council did the unusual thing of making public its views. Although the council withheld its statement until three weeks after the meeting at which it was drafted and given the reserve board, that lapse of time did not save the feelings of the board.

To show how it felt about the action of the advisory council, the board very promptly met and adopted a resolution by unanimous vote returning the council's statement to its secretary. This "spanking" has aroused a great many business leaders who have expressed fears that politics now is permeating the two federal agencies, for the advisory council is a body created by statute just as much as the federal reserve board. No one can tell what the outcropping of this situation may be. There are a number of men in the advisory council membership who have been outspoken in their support of President Roosevelt. Likewise, the President has named two members of the present reserve board, one or two others of that group of seven are entirely in harmony with his economic policies. Consequently, there is much talk in Washington that the two schools of economic thought are engaged in a clash that may be serious in its effect on the supervision of the country's banking structure.

Whatever may be the attitude of the reserve board, I have found a considerable body of opinion holding the advisory council was function ing within its own sphere when it made the statement to the board. As explained above, the board was under no compunction to abide by the expressions from the advisory council, and if it elected to do so it could allow the council's views to be pigeon-holed and forgotten. But the point is that the council is representative of business and financial interests and therefore, when it considered federal policies it was speaking for that segment of our national life which otherwise had no means of making itself vocal, according to much opinion in the National Capital.

Further, the fact that the council took direct issue with the administration is being regarded in many quarters as a healthy sign. I believe there is no dispute about the right of individuals or groups to criticize the political party responsible for government management at any time and if the particular part of our commerce and industry, represented by the advisory council, feels dissatisfied with the gold policy, with the unbalanced budget, with the continual spending and experiments that have gone on, there is a great number of people who insist those views should be disclosed. Some students of economy and government here hold to the opinion that such expressions may have a tendency to lead to policies acceptable to both sides.

This phase of the situation may be linked to the efforts which the administration has been making to accomplish an understanding with some important business leaders through frequent conferences at the White House and through informal and indirect meetings outside of Washington. I refer to the dinners and meetings which have been held, many in New York, by Prof. Raymond Moley, formerly the number one member of the brain trust but now a magazine editor. Although White House sources deny any part in the Moley dinners, most Washington observers accept the denial with a grain of salt. They are convinced that Mr. Roosevelt is fully informed of the views expressed by individual business leaders in those meetings and that he is seeking some basis of understanding with business. It takes no stretch of the imagination then to connect these various happenings, despite the wounded feelings of the federal reserve board.

Henry P. Fletcher, chairman of the Republican national committee, said the other little increase in Republican membership in the house of representatives. He can see no method, he said, of defeating the disbursement of cash that has been going on in the Roosevelt administration.

The Republican chairman's statement followed compilation by the Democratic national committee of figures showing the amount of cash that has been paid out by the government through its various channels since President Roosevelt took the reins. The Democratic committee compiled a list of states and set off against each state the amount of money distributed therein for relief, agricultural benefits, public works construction and otherwise. Democratic campaigners were not invited to use these figures but the basis and the real reason for their compilation.

The Republican chairman told newspaper correspondents in a press conference that he was not accusing the Roosevelt administration of buying votes but he added with candor that votes naturally were going to go toward the source of money supplied. With several billions being distributed and a considerable amount being turned loose within the last month, Mr. Fletcher made a clean breast of his feelings that it was difficult to battle Santa Claus.

In connection with the Republican charges over cash distribution both of the national committees have been compiling statistics respecting registration of voters through the country in preparation for the election. These reports indicate that public interest is aroused far beyond the usual condition. Voters are awakened to the importance of these elections.

Obviously, there are many local issues to be fought out and settled by the ballot. The situation in California is illustrative of this. Never before, I am told, has California seen such a registration list as is made up in anticipation of the vote on Upton Sinclair's program to "eliminate poverty in California."

Agricultural areas, according to the registration lists, are prepared to support or upset policies of the agricultural adjustment administration and some industrial centers show figures indicating widespread interest in the vote that is naturally to have a bearing on the status of the national recovery administration. Many astute politicians are saying that the great registration makes guesses as to the outcome rather hazardous, while the students of government welcome the large polling lists as encouraging evidence of awakening interest among the populace in this thing we call government.

FARM POULTRY

BETTER PRICES FOR CHICKENS AND EGGS

Outlook Is Encouraging for the Poultryman.

Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture—WNU Service.

Farmers may expect better prices for their chickens and eggs compared with last fall, mainly on account of the reduced production which it is expected will result from the scarcity and high price of feed, according to the bureau of agricultural economics in its poultry and egg outlook report.

Poultry production this year was the smallest since 1925, reports the bureau. The number of chickens hatched this year was about 10 per cent less than last year, and the number of hens in farm flocks was less than last year. There has been more than normal disposal of hens and pullets in drouth areas of the central states.

Scarcity of feed in many important poultry producing states is forcing poultrymen to dispose of some of their surplus young stock earlier than usual, and a considerable reduction in number of layers carried through the winter is expected.

"The prospective reduction of eggs throughout the fall and winter, and the relatively small production in prospect next spring, should result in a level of farm prices sufficiently high to offset in part a higher price of feed," says the bureau.

The bureau suggests that producers who are able to do so, maintain their laying flocks and carry young chickens over to heavier weights where natural range is available.

Must Keep Eggs Moving, Advises Poultry Expert

Producers who desire their eggs to reach the consumer in the best condition must not only give the eggs proper care while they are being held on the farm, but the eggs must be kept moving from the time they are laid until they reach the consumer, says Berley Winton of the Missouri College of Agriculture. The consumer wants eggs with a thick, jelly-like white, and an upstanding, firm yolk. Such eggs bring the most money and find the quickest sale.

Many eggs are reduced in quality while they remain in the nests. This is due to the fact that the temperature of the laying hen is normally 106 degrees Fahrenheit. If eggs are permitted to remain in nests during the forenoon when most hens lay, considerable deterioration takes place. It is a good practice, therefore, to gather eggs three to four times daily. After gathering they should be placed in a basket or exposed to the air, rather than kept in a bucket, and be permitted to cool over night before they are placed in the case. Exposure to the air will cause the body heat to escape the eggs and they will keep a longer period.

Cut Poultry Mortality

Heavy pullet mortality has long been recognized as one of the major problems for the poultryman, reports H. H. Kauffman, poultry extension specialist of the Pennsylvania State college. On many farms it has been found that 40 to 60 per cent of the pullets fail to complete their first laying year. These figures come from surveys made in several different states. The birds either die or are removed from the flocks because they are poor producers. Culls or market hens may be partially counted as mortality, as many fail in production because they do not have sufficient stamina to stand up under heavy production. There are, however, some vigorous hens that fail in production because they are hereditarily poor producers.

POULTRY NOTES

Poultry houses should be ventilated at the top.

There are several causes for leg weakness. One of the most common is intestinal parasites.

It is sudden changes of temperature that cause poultry roup and the removal of drafts is the best preventive.

Most of the hens in a flock can be kept in laying until late fall when they should be allowed to rest about six weeks.

It is surprising what the changing of growing chicks to fresh, new untaunted ground will do for them. It seems to act as a wonderful tonic.

Limberneck is not contagious and the outbreak may be handled by confining the birds until the trouble is located and then treating the flock with Epsom salts.

Ducks, chickens and other poultry preserved by quick freezing and held in storage six months or more are scarcely to be distinguished from fresh killed birds in both appearance and taste.

BRISBANE THIS WEEK

Mr. Van Loon Says
We Build Good Planes
Ford Sees Light
Why Pedro Jumped

Mr. Van Loon, able writer, who is "Dutch" and proud of it, doesn't want anybody to call him a Netherlander, or anything but just a plain "Dutchman"—wishes this fact made clear.

The two Dutchmen that followed so closely behind the British winners of the 11,000-mile air race were really demonstrating serious flying. They did not fly any made-to-order racing machine. They piloted a regular commercial plane and they carried passengers, as airplanes should do.

British aviators, interested in making flying pay for itself, say that the Dutch flyers' American machine, a Douglas air liner, with Wright Cyclone motors, and the United States Boeing transport plane in which Roscoe Turner and Clyde Pangborn were trailing for third place, are "straight stock commercial planes."

The British race winner is a "bullet-like racer."

This doesn't take away from the credit of the plucky Englishmen, or diminish in any way their marvelous performance in cutting the flying time from London to Australia by 100 hours. They made the flight to Darwin in 52 hours. But the race does show that private enterprise in the United States is able to build useful commercial planes.

Henry Ford, who even now pays out hundreds of millions a year, directly and indirectly, for well paid labor, sees "light in the darkness," and says our "Santa Claus methods" of handing out money have "made soddies of many Americans." But, in President Roosevelt's apparent determination to encourage independence and allow business men to run their own businesses, Mr. Ford sees great hope. He thinks we are crawling up over the top.

Here is a suicide story, brand new. Pedro Cirocito, fisherman of the island of Cerralvo, found a pearl weighing 100 karats, thought it was worth $100,000. When, at La Paz, Lower California, dealers would give him only $1,000 for his pearl, Pedro hurled his pearl into the ocean, jumped in after it, was torn to pieces by sharks.

Moralists would have convinced him that $100,000, if he had got the money, would have done him no good. He did not wait.

President Roosevelt possesses, among other agreeable and unusual qualities, that of giving full credit to others.

Receiving an honorary degree of doctor of laws, and speaking at William and Mary college, where Thomas Jefferson, Patrick Henry, John Marshall, James Monroe and John Tyler were students in the old Virginia days, the President gave full and generous credit to John D. Rockefeller, Jr., for his patriotic work in restoring to its colonial condition Virginia's ancient city, Williamsburg, "the cradle of American liberty."

Wherever there is trouble in the human body there is, not far away, some remedy for that trouble. Surgeons have always dreaded peritonitis, a widespread, dangerous inflammation that sometimes accompanies surgical operations.

Now science has discovered that a certain "amniotic fluid," always present in the child-bearing period in human beings and animals, supplies a vaccine that prevents peritonitis.

Doctors extract the amniotic fluid from cows, use it on their patients, and have reduced from 50 per cent to 2 per cent the mortality caused by peritonitis following operations on the bowels. This discovery will prevent many deaths from intestinal gunshot wounds and other typical American injuries.

Patrick Mulligan, of New York, unemployed chauffeur, penniless, learned just before midnight that his wife Cecelia, aged twenty-five, had given birth to three boys and one girl in the Lincoln hospital, first quadruplets born in that hospital in more than 50 years.

The four babies, total weight only ten pounds, lived only four hours. Perhaps that illustrates the difference between the life chance of babies born in the city and babies born in the country air, as were the still living Dionne Canadian quintuplets.

Senator Robinson of Arkansas, back from Germany, where he saw Hitler and Schacht, says that discrimination against the Jews is diminishing in Germany, the attitude of the Nazi being considerably modified.

The really surprising news, which might be listed under "Irony of Fate," is that Germany's export business is seriously crippled in all directions, except in one country, and that country—you would not guess it—is Palestine.

SORE MUSCLES

quickly relieved with "RRR". Rub it in. Stimulates local circulation. Its comforting warmth soothes muscular aches and pains. Used for 87 years to relieve stiff joints, neuralgia and sprains. Reduces inflammation. Penetrates. Does not blister.

RADWAY'S READY RELIEF

wind colic and stomach distress more quickly relieved with "RRR". The comforting warmth of a teaspoonful in a glass of hot water expels gas and brings you prompt relief. Great for that "morning after" feeling.

Kiwanis Notes

Locan Kiwanians, 20 strong, Tuesday night journeyed to Gilroy for a joint meeting with the 30 odd members of the club in that city.

Ed Wiesendanger, as chairman, introduced the Rev. Joe Bennett, speaker of the evening, whose topic was "The Current Unemployment Situation." During the course of his talk he explained the 'dole' system of England, which is really not a dole at all, but unemployment insurance, paid for by those participating in its benefits.

A week from Thursday Campbell clubmen and their ladies will be guests of Los Gatos club at a ladies' night program.

Ruth Townsend Hostess at Party

AMOS O. WILLIAMS

has served the county faithfully as
CORONER and PUBLIC ADMINISTRATOR

He is honest and capable.

He is experienced in the office.

He has furnished a modern, well equipped morgue without expense to the taxpayers.

His deputies receive no pay from public funds.

He has efficiently conducted his office at the least possible public expense.

The contention that the Coroner should not be an undertaker is wholly against the interests of the taxpayers.

This contention is instigated by a small group of undertakers who are not concerned with the general welfare.

It is to the interest of the taxpayers to re-elect

No matter where located, the farm with a telephone has neighbors

AND neighbors, to the isolated farm or ranch, can mean a lot. Sometimes their quick aid means saving a crop from disaster, or the entire farm, or a human life. Nothing does so much for so little as the farmer's telephone.

"I do not intend to play politics with human misery and despair by making sweeping promises that I will miraculously end unemployment and accomplish business recovery. The task of reconstruction and re-employment is not a one-man job; it is a tremendous task which calls for a new spirit of co-operation and unity of purpose on the part of the public officials and citizens alike. To that task I will give the best that is in me."
